Best Innovation: Paxis Twin Lakes Backpack

What's the worst aspect of wearing a backpack while fishing? That one's easy. Access to the contents. There's a reason why vests and sling packs have been so popular. Well, Paxis has something to say about that. While not designed exclusively for fly fishing, the Paxis Twin Lakes backpack has something we've never seen before: a flip-around rear compartment that looks like something from an Inspector Gadget cartoon. Dubbed the "Shuttle Pod," to access its contents, all you need to do is pull the release handle – though we prefer to call it a rip cord – and this rear compartment swings around your waist and appears, almost magically, right where you need it. It's one of the more imaginative design elements we've seen in quite some time, and solves a problem on the water (or on the trail) that many anglers have encountered over the years. We're looking forward to seeing what Paxis has in store next.
